Soiling Crops.

The system of soiling cattle commends itself to farmers in localities where land is high priced, on dairy farms that depend on prize butter for an income, and on farms where manure is in demand, to improve the productive qualities of the land. In a word, then, the advantages of soil-feeding are a saving of land, the production of an increased quantity and quality of milk with the same amount of food, and the production and saving of more and better manure than by the usual mode of feeding. The chief objection urged against soiling is the increased expense incurred in cutting and earthing the fodder, an objection wisely urged by farmers located on fertile, cheap lands. Another objection to the system is that it requires close attention and skillful management.

There naturally exists some diversity of opinion in regard to the crops best calculated for soil feeding. Green rye early in the spring, followed by oats, after which come orchard grass and clover, until the corn supply is ready, with roots of various kinds interspersed, is a popular rotation. A plan that allows twelve acres for keeping twelve cows and requires the growth of root crops outside of the regular operation of soiling, has been recommended by one who has tried it: "Early in autumn sow three acres of winter rye to be cut in the spring when dry food is scarce and the stock will most relish green food; early in the spring sow three acres to oats to be cut and fed out as soon as ready; a fortnight later sow two acres of oats or barley; in another fortnight sow two acres oats or barley; ten days later put in two acres of corn to be cut during August. Middle of June the three acres from which rye has been cut to be sown with corn, to be cut in September. Early in July the first three acres sown with oats to be resown with barley, to be cut from the middle of September until the harvest of roots and cabbages furnishes a stock of green refuse which will suffice until regular winter feeding begins. This number of acres and cattle, it ought to be explained, is suited to soil that is not in a high state of fertility."

A cultivator well known in the agricultural world has practised the following rotation for soiling crops with excellent results: In the fall winter rye is sown to be fed green in the spring until it becomes too old, when the balance is made into hay for winter feeding. By the time the rye is too old to cut he has orchard grass to mow and the pasture affords some feed. Orchard grass is followed by red clover. These two grasses, with Kentucky blue grass, fill up the time between the feeding of winter rye and the main crop of English grasses. Oats are sown as early in the spring as the condition of the ground will permit, and the crop is ready to cut after the last mowed grasses. The next crop sown after oats is corn; then comes millet. Oats, corn and millet are each sown at intervals of a week or ten days to bring a succession of tender feed through the season.

Winter wheat makes an excellent soiling crop, coming in just after winter rye. Corn and millet are sown to last until early frosts in autumn, when their place is taken by barley sown in mid-summer. Cabbages and turnips are employed for late feeding by many dairymen, but the authority referred to prefers feeding barley to rank flavored roots.

The plan of extending the season of feeding green food into November by sowing barley is in favor with a large class of Northern farmers. Some make a succession of sowings, putting in the first seed in July and the last as late sometimes as the first of September.

When there is sufficient moisture in the ground to sprout the seed this plan seems to be advisable, especially when staple crops are short and other provisions have not been made for supplying stock with late pasture and green fodder.

In localities where perennial grasses do not thrive, as at the South, field peas, sweet corn, lucern, Hungarian grass and millet may be sown as soiling crops any time after danger from frosts is over. Millet and sweet corn are especially recommended to grow in the South as green feed for time of drought or short pasture.

In practicing soiling it is advised to provide a liberal amount of dry early cut and well-cured fodder for feeding out during stormy weather and for mixing with green food when the condition of the animals seems to require this. Of course all surplus fodder must be cured for winter use. As one becomes accustomed to the soiling system so that supplies for an entire season can be correctly estimated, herds may be divided, giving the pasture to young, dry stock, while milch cows, that require but little exercise while in milk, can be fed in their stalls or from racks in the yard. Mr. H. Stewart, of New York, provides fodder-racks in yards and stables, and the fodder is brought in from the fields once a day in a wagon or cart. He keeps a one-horse mower in the field, which is covered when not in use with a water-proof tent-cloth. The horse is taken from the wagon, put to the mower and the required amount of fodder is cut, the first day two rations are cut, and one only is brought in; the second day's fodder is brought in when the third day's supply is cut, so that one day's feed is always ahead. The feed is brought in in the afternoon for a whole day, and the next day's feed is left on the ground. When the weather is wet, two day's feed is brought in and kept under cover to avoid working in the rain. It should be borne in mind that wet fodder is often dangerous to feed, especially clover; which may cause bloat.—N. Y. World.

Fascinated by an Alligator.

I was at the Zoo yesterday and saw something which is worthy of being mentioned. One of the gulls entered the pond where the alligator was lazily propelling himself about and proceeded to enjoy itself in its native elements. But the eye of the scaly monster was upon it and the mesmeric influence of its glance was soon felt. It was impossible for the gull to resist the baleful glare of the saurian; inch by inch it was attracted to the alligator, powerless to resist the fascination, until it came close enough for the reptile to open its mammoth jaws and gulp down the luckless bird. After having devoured its prey the alligator sank to the bottom to digest its meal.—Toronto Mail.

A Saratoga Marvel.

One of the marvels at Saratoga this season was a couple from the South, who have been regular visitors for fourteen seasons. These two have been married for twenty-four years, but the wife still addresses the husband as "dear" and he still calls her "darling," and is quite as attentive and deferential to her as he is to the wives of other men. They are both affable and sociable, fond of company, but they always are together and always enjoy everything in common. The weary husbands who are always inventing some excuse to avoid attendance on their families look at him with unbounded curiosity and surprise, while she is gazed at with unconcealed envy by her less fortunate sisters.—N. Y. Times

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

TUESDAY EVENING, OCT. 10, 1882.

TERMS:—The EVENING BULLETIN is published daily, and served free of postage at 6 cents per week; 25 cents per month; 75 cents per three months; $1.50 per six months, and $3 per year, payable in advance.

THE EVENING BULLETIN HAS A LARGER CIRCULATION IN THIS CITY, CHESTER AND ABERDEEN, OHIO, THAN ANY OTHER PAPER PUBLISHED IN MAYSVILLE.

GENERAL BUTLER has accepted the nomination for Governor of Massachusetts.

HON. W. VAUGHN PRATHER, on account of ill health, has withdrawn as a candidate for Register of the Land Office.

There is some talk of the removal of collector Robertson, on account of his alleged apathy regarding the New York nominations.

It is estimated at the Post-office Department that there will be a net revenue of more than $300,000 from the business of the money-order division during the last fiscal year.

The court of appeals has decided that a peace officer has the right to make an arrest without a warrant when acting upon information that a felony has been committed by the person or persons sought to be arrested.

NEW YORK Sun: If all the Republicans of New York who are now proclaiming their determination to vote against Folger keep their word, Cleveland will have the biggest majority ever given to any candidate in this state.

Nothing truer than this from the Rochester, (N. Y.,) Advertiser has ever been said: "The present Stalwart Administration owes its existence to the bullet of Guiteau and its success at Saratoga to forged despatches."

HARPER'S Weekly says it must be a mortifying reflection to Judge Folger that he has been nominated for the Governorship, and not by the free choice of Republican New York, but largely through the combination of government patronage with personal vengeance.

RETURNS of the vote of Arkansas on the liquor question at the election in September have been received by the Secretary of State from all the counties except one small one, and show 78,889 for license to 45,041 against. Only 12 out of 74 counties voted for prohibition.

ALBANY, N. Y., Argus: As the weekly newspapers come in from all parts of the state, it becomes apparent that the Republican disaffection is general throughout all the counties. Prominent politicians of the three parties say they hear of none except Stalwarts who will vote the Saratoga ticket. Many Stalwarts even are becoming frightened, and they are, as a general thing, willing to admit the probability of Judge Folger's defeat.

THE majority for Alexander H. Stephens of Georgia is now estimated at 60,000. Mr. Stephens on Friday sent to the Governor his resignation as congressman from the Eight Georgia District, and the Governor has ordered an election in November to fill the vacancy. It is said that Gartrell, the defeated candidate for Governor, will contest the election, "not with the hope of getting in, but to show alleged frauds and intimidation, and he hopes thereby to keep Stephens out until May next." A telegram from Washington announces that A. E. Buck, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Georgia, says that "in behalf of General Gartrell, he will contest the election of Mr. Stephens on several grounds."

An interpreter at San Carlos Agency in past years, in an interview says the origin of the dissatisfaction among the Indians was caused by the conduct of Agent Tiffany, who, instead of giving rations to the Indians, sold them to traders.

The committee in New York investigating the Fenian Skirmishing Fund, reports the alleged forged check given by Bossa to Breslin was not forged or dishonored, that there were funds in the bank to meet the check when drawn, but had been later attacked.

Treasury department Secret Service Detectives have arrested Wm. Salter, a furniture dealer in Washington, and Wilton Ward, formerly a messenger in the bureau of engraving and printing, on the charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government. It is said they were caught in an attempt to induce a female employe of the bureau to get for them some of the patent fiber paper on which the government prints its bonds and notes. They did not care whether it was printed or unprinted.

Says the Maysville Eagle:

Col. S. Smith Hurtt is a Democrat and believes in the right of local self government. He is opposed to a man in Maine meddling with the affairs of Kentucky. And as a resident of Owensville he does not think himself entitled to a voice as to the tenure of the Maysville post-office. Culbertson is a Grant consolidationist, believes in turning out loyal State Legislatures by the Federal bayonets, and while residing in Ashland took an active part in trying to get Roe Stockton turned out of the Maysville Post-Office. In this he was checkmated by the activity of the Democratic Representative.

Our friends in the other part of the Ninth district may rely upon Mason county at the congressional election on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, for the largest majority she has given any candidate for years. The support Col. Hurt will receive, will be solid and enthusiastic. There are no sores to be healed and no luke warmness nor apathy is apparent anywhere. If the other counties in the district will do as well as Mason, a largely increased majority may be expected.

Fashion Foibles.

New cloaks are very long. Cloth is the correct fabric for pelisses. Tournures are worn, but not universally. Rifle green is the popular color for ulsters.

New stockings show all of the high art colors.

Quilted satin lines more cloaks than sauteen or fur.

There is an effort to revive the princess style of dress.

Feather thistles appear among new bonnet trimmings.

China woolen goods and cheviot mixtures will be much worn.

Heavy repped ribbons take the name of ottoman and are much used.

Printed cashmere is a novelty for house wrappers, but is not tasteful.

Fur and leather bands will be used for dress as well as cloak trimmings.

Richelieu ribbon and plain spun-silk stockings are in favor for ordinary use.

Metallic threads, gold, silver and steel, in tinted effects, crop in new braids.

Long pile plush will in a great measure take the place of furs for cloak linings.

Alligator skin slippers in various shades of tan and fawn are novelties for morning wear.

The new cloaking materials have repped surfaces, either lengthwise or across the cloth.

Printed sateens with large figures on dark-colored and tinted grounds are used for cloak linings.

Jackets are made of all kinds of cloths, of velvet, plush, satin, brocade, chevots and Jersey webbing.

Balbriggan stockings come in superfine qualities in high art colors, oil-boiled and warranted not to fade in washing or wearing.

To keep Boys on the Farm.

Boys make men, and the more attractive, instructive and profitable we can make our farm-houses for the boys the more useful and successful will be the men and more likely to stick to the farm, which should have pleasant associations, as it has bright prospects, for intelligent and enterprising young men. The Western Stock Journal and Farmer appropriately says: Farmer boys should be trained to love the farm by giving them a moneyed and co-operative interest in it. They have claims on their parents beyond the simple act and knowledge of raising crops and feeding stock. They should be taught to exercise their ability in planning and to acquire judgement in buying and selling. It is not right to compel boys to work from year to year and never intrust them with business transaction, for it makes machines of them, which they soon grow to dislike. Farmers should consider that their sons have something more than physical strength to exercise in the development of the farm. They have mental ability and personal pride that should be exercised and brought into profitable service. Give the boys a chance to enjoy all their natural rights and they will do more profitable labor, and, as a rule, carry success and dignity with them into whatever department of labor they may enter.

Bran Beds for the Babies.

Louisa Globe.

A French doctor has invented a new bed for the babies which holds them safe in its custody, and prevents them from ever giving any trouble at night to their attendants. This gentleman has subjected his system to the most trying of all tests, for he has applied it to all his own children, and considers that the life of one of them is entirely owing to its use. The idea is to fill the greater portion of the cradle with bran and immerse the legs and part of the body of the child in this nest, covering them over in the usual way, but fastening down the counterpane tight so as to keep him firm in his place.

Why this change of tactics should have the effect of taking away from the infant his usual desire to howl during a part of every night is a question which we will leave nurses to explain for themselves after they have tried the system. In the meantime, until that trial has been made it is only civil to believe the testimony of Dr. Bourgeois and Vigoreaux, who in two French papers of some authority declared that such is the invariable result. This is not, however, the only advantage to be expected from the system. The bran is supposed to have a warming and stimulating influence superior to any sort of cotton or cloth, and to allow children of the more sickly kind to more quickly and to be sooner able to use their limbs. The inventor of the system declares that they delight in their bran beds, and always "quit them with regret," when removed at the age of two to one of a different kind.

JNO. A. MILLER, Millersburg, Ky.

The Woman who Giggled.

It is a singular fact that some people find it very difficult to be serious and solemn in churches and at funerals, and at other places and occasions, when propriety demands a subdued expression of countenance. Mrs. Milo Stephens, an Austin lady, is just that kind of a person. Whenever she attends a funeral, she gets a giggling fit, and brings disgrace on herself and confusion on everybody. Not long since, accompanied by her husband, Colonel Milo Stephens, she attended the last obsequies of a prominent Texas official, having solemnly promised not to emit a single giggle until she got back home, but she was hardly in the house of mourning before she saw something to excite her risibilities.

"For heaven's sake, Mirandy, wait until the funeral is over before you begin your infernal giggling."

"He! he! he!" giggled Mrs. Stephens. "Think of something serious."

"Think of your uncle, whom Governor Roberts refused to pardon out of the penitentiary."

The only response was a partially suppressed giggle, that attracted the attention of nearly everybody in the room.

"I hope none of the children will go near the cistern while we are away, as I left the trap-door open," whispered poor Colonel Stephens in despair.

The only response was another suppressed spasm of laughter. Finally, a happy thought struck Colonel Stephens. He whispered in her ear:

"The milliner on Austin avenue told me to tell you that she could not get your bonnet trimmed in time for you to wear it on Sunday."

The look of unutterable woe with which she responded scared him. During the rest of the funeral ceremonies strangers who were present supposed Mrs. Milo Stephens was the widow, such an appropriately sad expression was there on her countenance. She even shed tears.—Texas Siftings.

The Picturesque Side of Poverty.

Poverty, as we must all own, need not of necessity be squalid. Cross the Channel and take a look at the continental towns and cities. There the life of the lower classes has its picturesque side; the result, or possibly the cause of a natural taste for the beautiful being developed even in the poorest peasant. The fisher-girls upon the opposite coast deck their persons as well as their houses, and go about their daily tasks unconscious models for the artist. The blue-bloused peasant working in the fields must supply his bit of color to complete the landscape; and the bourgeois condemned to town-life would not suffer about him the sad-colored houses and sober surroundings which we allow under our gray skies. What a host of stored-up pictures crowd into the mind, as memory fills in the pleasant background of a poor man's life abroad! Even the lazy lazzaroni who lounge through life under Italian skies ask their alms upon palace-steps, amid the plash of fountains and the scent of orange-groves! But what a revolting contrast presents itself when we think of a poor man's life at home in Seven Dials or similar slums, the Augean stables of civilization, whose cleansing and beautifying must needs prove an Herculean task!

And sight is not the only sense gratified upon the other side of the Channel. The ear is pleased as well as the eye. Open-air concerts are put within reach of the people at a mere nominal cost, or at no cost at all. The German imbibes with his beer a refreshing draught of music, which elevates him above the mere sensual enjoyment of the moment. The mountaineer jodels his way cheerily from Alp to Alp, and peasant voices everywhere lend themselves almost unconsciously to a "concord of sweet sounds," which makes the wheel of life revolve smoothly and harmoniously.—Chambers' Journal.

—The people of Egan, D. T., finding it impossible to complete more than one church in the town, erected a neat edifice, called it a Union Church, and services are held regularly with a rotation of resident ministers.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain it effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

From Rev. P. N. GRANGER.

Presiding Elder of the St. Albans District. ST. ALBANS, VT., Jan., 20, 1880. DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In reply to your letter I will say that my experience with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure' has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it, cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks when he became better, but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring-bone was forming, I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found. Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

Perseverance Will Tell.

STROUGHTON, MASS., March 16, 1880. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—In justice to you and myself, I think I ought to let you know that I have removed two bone spavins with 'Kendall's Spavin Cure,' one very large one, don't know how long the spavin had been there. I have owned the horse eight months. It took me four months to take the large one off and two for the small one. I have used ten bottles. The horse is entirely well, not at all stiff, and no bunch to be seen or felt. This is a wonderful medicine. It is a new thing here, but if it does for all what it has done for me it will be very great.

Respectfully yours, CHAS. E. PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, yet it is penetrating and powerful to reach a every deep seated pain or to remove any bony growth or other enlargement, such as spavins, splints, curbs, callous, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used for man or beast. It is now known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated Circular which we think gives positive proof of its virtues. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

Price $1. per bottle, or six bottles for $5. ALL DRUGGISTS have it or can get it for you or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO. Enosburgh Falls, Vermont. 127d.
